CHILD STOLEN BY MOTHER WHO DESERTED HER

Foster Parent of Mamie Smith Heartbroken Over Her Disappearance.

RECALLS OLD ROMANCE

The disappearance of little Mamie Smith, aged twelve years, from the home of her foster mother, Mrs. Reizzak, of No. 225 Fifth street, revives the story of a Brooklyn sensation of twelve years ago, when the mother of Mamie left her home secretly, never again to be seen by her parents. What name Mamie has a right to bear is a mystery to those who reared her.

"The story, as far as we have been able to piece it out," said the girl's foster sister, Mrs. M. Pavlick, a handsome young matron, who lives with her husband at No. 345 East Ninth street, "is that Mamie's mother was the only daughter of well-to-do Brooklyn people, and had been brought up a strict Catholic. I was a child when she came over to our house nearly twelve years ago with a letter from some friends, who thought my aunt might take her baby to board.

"We were rather poor then, with three youngsters, myself, my sister, now Mrs. Davis, and my brother, to be fed and clothed and sent to school, so the $10 a month was quite an inducement. At that time my aunt could not make many inquiries as to who 'Mrs. Smith' was, because we spoke little English. and the stranger spoke no German or Hungarian.

"For a month or two the mother came regularly to pay the child's board, but after that she used to send word for us to get it from her at different cafes along Avenue A and the neighborhood. My brother and I used to go for the money, and in this way I got to know the girl. She was only sixteen

Tall, With Golden Hair.

"My recollection of her is that she was rather tall, with what I thought was a wonderful figure and very beautiful clothes. Her hair was naturally golden, and she had large babyish blue eyes and the most regular and beautiful teeth I ever saw. When she smiled she dimpled up and showed the teeth so prettily that we thought her charming. Her hair was cut quite short One day I asked her how this happened, and was told that it was to disguise her from people who were looking for her. Another time she told me that she had worn long skirts only

"You see,' she said, 'with long skirts and short hair and a woman's hat on, they never could recognize me.' After that she became confidential, and said that she had been singing in the dhoir of a Brooklyn Catholic cohurch and had fallen in love with a young fellow who also sang there. They had eloped, and he had brought her to a furnished home somewhere in this district, where the long dress and short-hair idea had been adopted. When her baby was about to be born he left her penniless and without a friend. She was taken to a hospital, but managed to get away with her child without any of the societies objecting.

Foster Mother Heartbroken.

"How the mother could be so heartless as to take her away without a word to use is beyond comprehension. My aunt will die. She boxt her only son long ago, and we have married and left her, but this child was there, taking our places. All last night we had to sit by aunts bed and try to soothe her. She has only one thought in her mind, and all day she is praying agairst what she fears. The younger sister, Mrs. Dayls, who had been standing in front of the house nearly all day in the snow and storm, came in, her bare head dripping wet. She had exhausted her tears and was in a mood to be ugly.

'If anything wrong happens to that child," she cried, "depend upon it, I'il follow that mother until I find her, no matter if it takes years, and when I find her I will kill her.

"If we don't hear from her within twenty-four hours I shall appeal to the Gerry Society. I'd be able to stand it if she would let us know where she is. It isn't that we so much want the child as that we must know that she is in a proper place with proper people."

In fact, we had come to believe a general strike was threatened, and the men working on the Post & McCord contracts went out on Nov. 3 and I went to work we bought her clothes and helped keep her in school, and after I sot married my younger sister took up the responsibility. My husband always accepted Mamle as one of the family. She came here every day to play with our baby, and was a great favorite in the Academy of the Holy Redemption, in Fourth street. Indeed, the Sisters liked her so well that they gave her presents of clothes, although it was known that we dressed her very well. She used to come to my husband oandy and such trifles.

"Six months ago I would have laughed at the idea that there could be anything better for a table beverage than coffee," writes an Ohio woman—"now I laugh to know there is."

"Since childhood I drank coffee as freely as any other member of the family. The result was a puny, sickly girl, and as I grew into womanhood did not gain in health, but was afflicted with heart trouble, a weak and disordered stomach, wrecked nerves and a general breaking down, till last winter, at the age of 38, I seemed to be on the verge of consumption. My friends greeted me with 'How bad you look! What a terrible color! and this was not very comforting.
